In general, only a licensed attorney can give legal advice, but there is distinction between “legal advice” and “legal information.” Any non-lawyer can simply recite laws, but it is illegal for a non-lawyer or unlicensed attorney to offer legal advice or represent someone other than herself in a court of law.

Legal Advice vs. Legal Information | LegalMatch

What Legal Advice Is Advice from friends or family does not constitute legal advice. True legal advice forms an agreement between an attorney and his or her client based on a particular legal matter the client is experiencing. In a nutshell, legal advice has the following characteristics: Requires legal knowledge, skill, education and judgment
